Description: Tax issues are what keep the sole and small firm lawyer up at night. Issues that have crossover application into different areas are the most challenging. This program will address tax topics that commonly intersect in family, estates, and real estate law, specifically the unintended impact of tax planning in estates and business as it concerns support and equalization.

This webinar will cover topics such as:

- Deemed dispositions, new trust rates and rollovers on the Federal side;

- Joint accounts, equity & the Estate Administration Tax Act (with related Estate Administration Tax) estate freezes, and how they are treated for equalization purposes;
- Incorporation: resulting or constructive trusts, and how retained earnings in a corporation are treated in family law when addressing support; plus
- Cottage properties and matrimonial home tax planning.

Includes handouts

Light refreshments will be offered

Note: Neither session can be run with less than 3 participants

The Lawyer's Guide to the Forensic Sciences / by Caitlin Pakosh

Forensic science — science applied to the legal context — advances rapidly and has undergone dramatic changes in recent years. In contrast, the law embraces finality in administering justice and struggles to change with evolving scientific knowledge. Improving the scientific literacy of the legal community, however, may help to mitigate this tension.

To that end, this guide provides criminal lawyers, defence and Crown alike, with a macroscopic view of multiple forensic science disciplines, specific to the Canadian legal system and written by Canadian experts. Facilitating further case-specific research, this guide seeks to reinvigorate dialogue and improve collaboration between the forensic and legal communities in Canada, and contribute to the effective functioning of a fair and reasonable criminal justice system.
