Details: With a number of different approaches to handling high-conflict files, the family lawyer must be discerning. From the moment a client walks in your office, you need to figure out the best way possible to proceed:

How do you decide which factors are important to consider?

- Negotiation is appropriate in certain cases
- Mediation can be right in other cases
- Alternatively, litigation might be the only option

A panel of experienced lawyers will answer these questions and help you to understand processes that are available throughout the life of a high-conflict file (or one that becomes high-conflict).
